Computational Methods for Differential Equations

Computational fluid dynamics (CFD) is a branch of fluid mechanics that uses numerical analysis and data structures to analyze and solve problems that involve fluid flows. Computers are used to perform the calculations required to simulate the free-stream flow of the fluid, and the interaction of the fluid (liquids and gases) with surfaces defined by boundary conditions.

Computational phylogenetics is the application of computational algorithms, methods, and programs to phylogenetic analyses. The goal is to assemble a phylogenetic tree representing a hypothesis about the evolutionary ancestry of a set of genes, species, or other taxa. For example, these techniques have been used to explore the family tree of hominid species and the relationships between ...

I have a bibtex database of optimization references (900K) available online. These are mostly interior point references. A searchable version of this bibliography is also available. I also have an unorganized list of announcements of computational packages that are available for solving a variety of problems. This page is not updated often enough, so some of the links are no longer functional.
